

GiveFlow

Local giving. Real economics. Quiet work seen.

For town leaders

Every dollar that leaves your town is a neighbor you lose.

Volunteers burn out. Storefronts empty. Young families move away. The quiet work that holds a small town together — the coach, the food pantry, the shop owner who sponsors the team — goes unseen until it disappears.

GiveFlow is a local rewards economy that names that work, keeps dollars circulating at home, and gives town leaders the data to prove it.

IF YOU'RE A TOWN LEADER WHO...

- watches good volunteers quietly stop showing up,
- hears "there's nothing for young people here" one more time,
- wants Main Street businesses to feel the return on giving back,
- needs real numbers when the budget conversation happens —

...this is built for you.

HOW A TOWN SPONSORSHIP WORKS

1. Seed

Every resident who joins gets 100 Flow to start. No cost to the town. The economy begins the day you launch.

2. Circulate

Residents earn Flow for volunteering, helping neighbors, and civic acts. They spend it at local businesses you approve.

3. Prove

You get a live dashboard: dollars kept local, hours volunteered, businesses lifted, neighborhoods engaged.

WHAT HAPPENS NEXT

A 30-minute call. We map your town's volunteer network, three anchor businesses, and one civic priority (public safety, youth, food access — you pick). You get a written pilot plan within a week. No contract to hear us out.
